Cholo Juanito and Richard Douglas DataRigen Giuliac Giuliac, PeruPeriodo Art InformationPeriodo activities 2003-presentWebWebSite Raul Cconcha Kispé (Juliaca, September 29, 1983)Richard Emilio Henriquez Ventura (Santiago, Cusco, October 13, 1978) Edited by Wikidat by El Colo Juanito and Richard Douglas is the stage name of the popular Peruvian comedy duo, consisting of Raoul Conch Kispeth (Juliaca, September 29, 1983) and Richard Emilio Henriquez Ventura (Cuzco, October 13, 1978) from Giuliac in 2003. They achieved internationalization in Bolivia, where he emphasized his participation in the presidential campaign of President Evo Morales. This open-air theatre, based on family entertainment, has been expanded into a television series. Career Beginning duo In his early duet there was no more promotional marketing than generated through the informal trade of their DVD productions available throughout Bolivia. According to one entry, he explains where it came from: -Richard: Hey, Cholino, do you know who my best person is? - Juanito: no! - Richard: Fuhimoria! - Juanito: Yeah! This one was always messing with thieves... Do you know who Evo Morales is? - Richard: Yes, of course he is the leader of Cocacero Bolivia ... - Juanito: He is my dad! They met while in college and, seeing that they were making a good duet, they dropped out of school to fully devote themselves to this activity. They both claim to have been surprised by their success in Bolivia, to such an extent that they could not walk down the street because people constantly stopped them to ask for autographs. Henriquez plays Richard Douglas, an urban Creole man who seems to have more of the world; and Cconcha Cholo Juanito, a man city newcomer to the big city. However, between a joke and a joke Juanito proves that he has more suspicion than his friend Richard. The popularity of Marco Rosales Echase, a Bolivian based 20 years ago in the United States, passing through Bolivia claims to have seen videos of Cholo Juanito and Richard Douglas around the world and witnessed crowds of people to see them in bars and restaurants. I was tired of watching it, and eventually I bought a DVD, Marco speaks with his Hispanic New York accent. He adds that the big one was his surprise at seeing that in Virginia, several Bolivians had the same DVD. It's fashion this season in Bolivia, it can't be overlooked, says Marco, who stresses that the material has a good sound and is edited pretty well for the unreliability that these homemade products tend to have. In 2009, they arrived in Karanawi, a city north of La Paz, where they performed at Orlando's Kiroga Stadium in front of nearly 2,000 spectators who witnessed the scenes Peruvian comedians. After the performance, they took to the streets to take pictures with the audience, despite the fame they reaped. Presentations Due to their great success, they performed in Buenos Aires and performed one performance. They performed at the Hurricane Stadium in front of three thousand people. For some entrepreneurs, this was a considerable amount, as on the same day there were several alternative activities in the Bolivian and Peruvian collective in Buenos Aires. In the promotions before their performance, the time they were invited to radio programs aimed at the Bolivian collective, people will reach the radio to order an autograph and take a picture with the duo. The music in this duet roles are well appointed, and for many their jokes are only good if they tell them, since the gesticulation of both, especially Cholo Juanito, adds a lot of grace to their performance. Richard Douglas plays Peruvian and Bolivian rhythms with harp and while Holo Juanito sings and dances, demonstrating his skills for Peruvian cobblers and sailors. Suddenly Juanito makes a stop at the show and randomly selects people from the audience to dance, especially cholitas. The formula for this improvisation leads to a comic scene that may well serve as an example in the face of social prejudice; because regardless of origin or accent the main thing is to show yourself and generate everyone's laughter equally.
